Summary:

Princesa 81 is a psychology center in Madrid founded in 2009 by two professionals trained at the Clinical Psychology Unit of the Complutense University of Madrid. The center was born with the idea of being a collaborative psychology center, where professionals help each other, supervise each other, and create a nurturing environment in which common projects can arise. We are a team of board-certified psychologists registered in Madrid, with extensive professional experience and a solid academic background. In addition to offering different types of therapies to adults, couples, children and the elderly, the center is also providing internships for Psychology undergraduates and Master students from different universities and it is becoming a reference center in Madrid. As of 2015, the center offers psychosocial training for security and emergency professionals, as well as specialized psychological care for them. We also offer different educational and outreach programs for public.
